Tinkerbell Asks:

What is that slippery stuff on my ball when it comes from the ball return?

It is oil and it may not be from your French fries.

The oil pattern affects the way your ball goes down the lane.

Typically, there is much more oil in the middle of the lane than on the outside. This allows more "hook" from the outside part of the lane to the pocket.

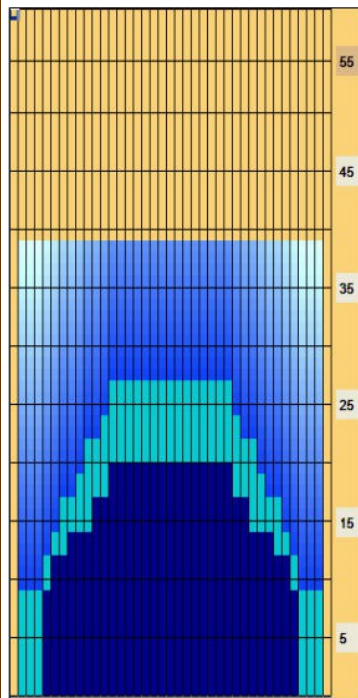

How much of the lane that the oil covers matters. The longer the pattern, the less your ball can hook.

Do you ever miss your target but still strike? The reason is that there is a lot of oil in the middle of the lane and very little on the outside part. If you are a right-handed bowler and miss your mark to the left, the extra oil toward the middle of the lane helps the ball hold position and not hook too much. If you miss to the right, there is less oil and the ball hooks more, allowing it to get back to the pocket.

Bottom line: make sure to use your practice time wisely to find out exactly where the oil is.
